Too early to bet on rural recovery; stay selective

Growth in FMCG sector modest due to low base, say analysts

It may be a little early to cheer the recovery in the fast-moving consumer goods (FMCG) space as a deceleration in discretionary demand, after the festive season, may offset fragile rural recovery, analysts have cautioned.

"The overall demand environment for staples remains muted, while discretionary demand trends have seen some deceleration after the festive season. We believe margins in staples have bottomed out, but we expect only a gradual uptick with the ongoing softening in raw material prices. This is because companies have begun to effect price cuts to protect market share against unorganised players, and will also need to increase marketing spends, which have been low for the past few years," said Himanshu Nayyar of Systematix Research, in a note co-authored with Rajesh Mudaliar and Chetan Mahadik.

Consumer staples demand in rural areas witnessed sequential recovery in the latter half of the October-December quarter (third quarter, or Q3), with raw material cost pressures abating, price cuts announced by companies, and inflation receding. Besides, wage growth overtook inflation, the unemployment rate dropped, and sowing and tractor sales reveal strong trends.

Abneesh Roy of Nuvama Institutional Equities, however, points out that although the overall monsoon was good, the headline data hides the deficit in four high-population states of Bihar, Uttar Pradesh, Bengal, and Jharkhand.

"Modest growth in rural markets is almost entirely due to the base effect as rural slowdown started in the second half of 2021-22. The lower end of the rural job market seems to be improving, but these are early days and sustainability is needed," he said in a report from Rushabh Bhachawat and Jainam Gosar.

According to data by retail intelligence firm Bizom, demand from rural areas declined 0.2 per cent on a month-on-month basis in December, while it was down 17 per cent in November. The overall demand, however, was up 1.4 per cent on a month-on-month basis.

In their quarterly update, Godrej Consumer Products, Dabur, and Marico unanimously witnessed sluggish growth in Q3, driven by poor rural consumption and slowdown after the festive season. Dabur India said overall demand remained weak because rural markets remained under pressure. Besides, the late onset of winter in North India had added to the weakness, it said.

declined 0.2 per cent on a month-on-month basis in December, while it was down 17 per cent in November. The overall demand, however, was up 1.4 per cent on a month-on-month basis.

Discretionary demand heads south

Discretionary demand, too, has seen some deceleration after the festive season as inflation began to impact demand at the mass end of the market.

Quick service restaurant (QSR) players saw slowdown in growth, with aggregators focusing on higher order values and lowering discounts.

Kotak Institutional Equities (KIE) expects Asian Paints to witness a deceleration in the three-year volume (ex-putty) compound annual growth rate (CAGR) to 8 per cent (similar to the pre-pandemic levels) in Q3 versus 11 per cent in the first half of 2022-23.

"We expect weakness across QSRs (except Westlife Development) with a flat or sequential dip in average daily sales. Jubilant FoodWorks' three-year revenue CAGR should moderate further to 8.4 per cent, from 9-10 per cent and margin pressure should rise. Devyani International, Sapphire Foods India, and Restaurant Brands Asia should report a weak revenue and earnings before interest, tax, depreciation, and amortisation print," it said.

Investment strategy

Analysts suggest investors selectively pick FMCG stocks from a medium- to long-term perspective and focus on how the companies deal with ease in input costs.

Preeyam Tolia, senior research analyst at Axis Securities, is bullish on Hindustan Unilever (HUL) and Dabur India as he believes domestically-inclined FMCG companies will do relatively better.

Rent agreement: Don't blindly sign on form downloaded from internet

Get lawyer to draft it, ensure it spells out key points of landlord-tenant relationship

BINDISHA SARANG

Mumbai Police has issued an advisory to property owners saying landlords must do proper checks before renting out their place. It adds that the landlord must immediately furnish the tenant's particulars online on the citizen portal Mumbaiipolice.gov.in.

"Tenant verification must be done to safeguard the landlord's interests and ensure that the property is being rented out to the right person. Doing a background check is mandatory under Section 188 of the Indian Penal Code, and failure to do so is a punishable offence," says Akhil Gupta, co-founder and chief technology officer, NoBroker.com.

In addition to police verification, a properly drafted rent agreement can help safeguard the landlord's interests.

Three types of agreements

Three types of agreements between landlord and tenant are popular: rent agreement, lease deed, and leave and licence agreement.

Pratyush Miglani, managing partner, MVMAC, says, "Rent agreements are, usually, short-term, legally binding agreements between landowners and tenants, which allow the latter to occupy the owner's property. Such agreements are usually revised and renewed monthly."

When the tenure of occupation is long, owners and tenants usually sign a lease deed or agreement. Abhinay Sharma, managing partner, ASL Partners, says, "Lease agreements are usually signed for a longer duration. If it is for more than 11 months, then registration is mandatory."

The third type of agreement is leave and licence. This is a contract wherein the licensor grants the licensee the right to use the premises for a specified period, typically 11 months. Gautam Sahni, partner, Vesta Legal, says, "Leave and licence

WHEN CAN A LANDLORD ASK A TENANT TO VACATE?

- The landlord can evict a tenant, with prior notice, if the latter is found to be flouting the terms and conditions of the agreement
- If the tenant has leased the rented property to another person without prior intimation
- If the property has to be reconstructed
- If a neighbour complains of nuisance multiple times
- If the tenant is using the property for illegal purposes

agreement is a legally binding document which outlines the terms and conditions agreed upon between a licensor and a licensee for the grant of the licence."

Here, the licensor grants the licensee a temporary right to occupy and use the immovable property, without (in law) parting with its possession. Sahni says, "A licensee merely receives a permission granted by the property owner to occupy and use it. A lease, on the other hand, entitles the lessee or tenant to exploit the immovable property and receive the same benefits that the landlord is entitled to."

Don't miss out on key clauses

Whatever the form of the agreement between the landlord and the tenant, it must include a few key clauses. One, it should clearly mention the amount of rent the tenant needs to pay each month and the due date by which it must be paid. The agreement should also mention the security deposit the tenant needs to pay.

While there is no set formula, in most cases it equals one or two months' rent and is decided by mutual consent.

The agreement should also mention the amount that will be refunded. Gupta says, "When the tenant vacates, many landlords deduct some amount from the deposit to get the house painted. This amount should also be mentioned in the agreement."

Gupta adds that the agreement should also mention the period for which the property is being rented, the terms of renewal, other payments, list of fittings and fixtures, and so on.

The lock-in period and termination clause should also be mentioned. Suvigya Awasthy, associate partner, PSL Advocates & Solicitors, says, "The rent agreement should clearly mention the consequences if the rent agreement is terminated within the lock-in period."

Enlist a lawyer's services

A well-drafted agreement should clearly spell out the rights and obligations of both the landlord and the tenant to avoid misunderstandings and disputes in the future.

Don't download an agreement from the internet or sign blindly on one prepared by the broker. Anushka Arora, principal & founder, ABA Law Office, says, "Get the terms of the agreement drafted by an advocate who is well versed with the concerned laws."

The agreement must be registered. Sahni says, "The licence agreement or lease deed must be registered in accordance with the provisions of the Registration Act, 1908."

The registration cost and the stamp duty should be borne equally by both the parties. According to Gupta, failure to do so might lead to unwanted legal action. Before renting, the landlord may also check the tenant's credit score with the latter's consent.
